I am building an Extranet site for a client and think that this program is as good as it gets. You may have to do a little Turkish translation, but it well worth the effort.

Two thumbs up!!!

Ok it looks good on their own site, But try added yourself to the database. It constantly fails to log you in.

This remains a problem when you finally get your own installation running, that's if it redirects to the register page correctly. After 2 hours of trying I could not reach the admin area.

Will advise if I finally get all running properly.

I tried this portal and first half the download links did not work and gave a 404 error. Then there was no install instructions. The read me said to run install.php I ran it and it came up asking to pick a language. I said English, 4 times, and it wouldn't go any further. I would not recommend anyone waste their time on this until they provide a how to install and fix the obvious bugs. Very frustrating experience!

I have been on their site for weeks now and have not seen any updates. They have in the news that version 7 will be out in July 2006 and it is now November 2006 and there is no version 7.

None of the support posts on their forum have been answered in weeks.

The gallery has all kinds of errors.

In the system it self there is not gallery nor forum nore is there a way to change the skin in the admin area.

I would go with some thing that is still being made and supported. use ocPortal

Simple light weight CMS, which is easy to manage and use for the common public. Being a developer myself, I found it easy to add new modules. Keep up the good work guys !!

Downloaded the v7 and unzipet uploaded and ran the install script. after a minor bug it was installed and looked nice, until you try to login it keeps refering to a folder called dcp that does not exist it might work if the site is installed in a folder called dcp but then again it might not.

With a portal like this I don't want to spend hours fixing bugs after install, it just needs to run. so im going to find a portal that is better supported and with a larger userbase and site.
