Allright, I have to admit, I'm not a genius setting up pages that include cgi. And Matt seems to know this. After downloading the script, setting it up was as easy as can be. At first, I had to modify only a few strings in the script itself, then upload them, chmod them and I was ready to run the setup through my browser. The admin panel was just brilliant and the script came with some very neat and easy to modify HTML-templates, that hardly needed any changes. And above all, this script is for free. Use it!
