Several month ago I listed here in hotscripts for ideal platform for online magazine.

As we are living in the world of competition I knew that it wouldn't be easy to compare my (I can say good) html knowledge with some new unknown system web magazines are based on.

I found free sources but something was been wrong on server in that time and I gave up. With more search here I found Article manager from interactivetools and some other company.

At first I bought another one and after that I got also kindly response from Interactivetolls stuff. I checked once again both systems and decide to buy also from them. It cost me around $500 both together, but I was been surprise when I got support from the Interactivetools. They know well that I am not php or shtml expert and since I bought it they helped me to make some vision for online magazine.

What I want to say is it. If I going to buy something to the store, day latter stuff even don't or don't want to recognize me. Here in Interactivetools I bought and I geting back.

The best ever content management system, Jul 27th, 2005

I had an ambition to be a web designer. I had learnt HTML and other languages. It took a long time and big efforts. My pages, however, were not great. I was introduced to this excellent and advanced, easy to master product "Article Manager". These guys are doing an excellent job in saving people's time. The pages look great and the management of sites became a fun more than a burden as it used to be before "Article Manager"

Trust me this is an amazing product. It is worth the money one can spend.

This product is a dream to integrate, and you can call an 800 number and actually speak to a real person. The tech support people are knowledgeable and will actually get the job done. The script is versatile and could be used to create almost any kind of site beyond an article publishing site. Plus, after posting almost 50 articles personally I can vouch for the fact it works flawlessly. Highly recommended!

Article Manager exceeds expectations, Dec 23rd, 2005

After buying most things, you feel a bit let down that they don't live up to the hype - the opposite has been true for me with AM. With no HTML knowledge 18 months ago, I wanted a content management product to get me going quickly - now my website has over 300 pages and I have friends also with no HTML skills adding articles too. The support is fast and efficient - far exceeding my expectations, as it is provided with no ongoing charge! I'd recommend AM to any new or experienced webmasters.

I have been using Article Manager for 3 years and find it reliable and flexible in supporting a few of my websites with pages and syndicated links. Recently I had to move it to a new server, for which I had access to limited info, and I found three members of their tech support team anxious to work with me in testing various approaches to the problem of moving a live site with little downtime. Further, as a novice website developer, I have been able to modify design and content with ease.

It's surprising just how flexible and powerful AM is. Virtually every single requirement my client threw at me could be accommodated either by direct manipulation of AM's templates or by inclusion of some javascript and SSIs. Interactive's support is excellent – the 'big boys' could learn a few lessons there! If I had to sum up AM in a short, easy sentence, I guess it would have to be "Article Manager - what you want, where you want it" because, quite simply, that's what it enables you to do!!

We have a very successful on-line news & travel magazine, averaging 30,000 unique visitors a month. Over the last 5 years we have tried several CMS applications, with limited success. A year ago we switched to Article Manager, and there is no comparison! The power, flexibility and ability to modify the script have left us searching no further! Forget open source headaches and buy Article Manager if you need a serious application that is powerful but easy to use; great tech support too!

This is a straight forward program to edit news for several targeted groups of readers. Editors in our institute appreciate working with Article Manager, just because it's so easy to use, but on the other hand gives great potential to any article. When the templates are set up with all the necessary style-elements and Article Manager Tags, a webmaster can just sit back and enjoy the job that's been done by the editors. AM is without doubt the most flexible, adaptable and easy-to-use CMS available. Unlike other solutions there is no difficult learning curve to overcome before users are in and creating articles.

AM allows me to build CMS sites for my clients and move on to the next without having to worry about training.

After more than two years experience in two different versions of Article manager I still have unchanged mind about this company. Stuff there is doing great things, not only technical, there is also support on highest level I has seen online. If they don't than I should not write Review here. Maybe is it looking like a text of insiders, but is not. I am just simple individual outsider and individual user living in small country in N Europe, called Iceland. Thanks to stuff again.
