This free, simple yet powerful gallery content manager system is a joy to use. It isn't bloated and has most of the features that I require for my site. Being PHP and standards based made it easy to drop into my already existing site. The mass zip downloads, rss feeds, slideshows, auto generated thumbs, and etc. are great features to have around. Even though Plogger is young in development life I have high hopes and welcome the future of this piece of software. I recommend to those that have tired to deal with the bloated gallery systems already out there, that want to try something new.

to me its the #1 open source personal gallery script, Oct 3rd, 2005

I have already installed it on 3 of my sites and it just takes 5 minutes to install and call the gallery in the page layout. I used many other gallery scripts, some even paid ones but customizing to fit in the sites layout was never easy as with plogger. I say you should definitely try it. By the way, it costs you $00.00 for all this.

Did I forget to tell you? its very search engine friendly.

Good luck.

Installation was prompt and precise. In less than two minutes one is up and running. At this stage if this application is of so much fun to use, I can assure it will mature to be a giant in the industry. Good work

Amazing Functionality, Nov 24th, 2005

This gallery script is undoubtedly the "definitive open source gallery". It is well coded and documented, easily customizable, and one of the first galleries to be entirely XHTML and CSS compliant, a huge bonus for any contemporary web designer/developer. The customizability of the script is limitless, and the power of CSS makes cosmetic changes a snap.

The dev team is amazingly helpful on their forums. With expected WordPress integration and more in Beta3, it really is time to download Plogger.

There is power in simplicity, Feb 18th, 2006

The simple web-based installation and professional design are impressive. I also liked the option of uploading images by web form or ftp. The administration is clear and powerful, and the slideshow is slick.

However, there is no way to change the display order of albums besides finding and manually changing the sql (the default is by album name descending). Images can be ordered by name, date, etc. but there is no way to order them individually.

All in all a great product.

Nice script, but I'm not sure about the way you mixed the presentation with the business logic. Try using a template engine, so it can be integrated to a website or cms as a module or componen. And a quick question, why not using LGPL licence? Looks great, well done.

Good gallery for small needs, Apr 8th, 2006

First of all, this gallery do most things it is supposed to do. It is meant to be simple and easy to use. This is the part I really like about it. The upload is BY FAR the best I have seen in ANY gallery. But it is not usable for big galleries due to the lack of support for IPTC. I would not even think about retyping title and description for several thousand pictures! And there is no support for multiple users, protected folders or watermarking. This said, it is probably the best simple galler

I tried plogger when Gallery2 got out of control. all in all this is a great album. The remote stuff (f-spot support) is not ready as stated in the docs. Other then that this is really good stuff. I can not wait to see were this goes. I have been using it for 3 weeks now and only complaint is the remote support. Give it a shot, if you tried of how BIG gallery2 is you will love this. Clean and Simple. Good work!! I gave it a 4 for lack of Remote (f-spot) support. Cheers
