Description: SEED is a unique open-source Content Management System and website development tool for use by civic and conservation organizations. SEED is designed specifically for building the capacity of local organizations and their networks (at local to global scales) to more effectively communicate amongst themselves and their target audiences to more effectively achieve their conservation goals. SEED has been created by environmentalists who understand the needs of young organizations and that time is a luxury few of us have to spend on learning complicated systems. With SEED you can have your own dynamic website with no previous experience in website design or coding. PLEASE NOTE that our ability to offer services -including SEED- for free, depends entirely on funding from grants and thus, there are times that the funding dries up and we are not able to help NEW clients for free. Please visit our website for more up-to-date information.
