I own this script. After repeated attempts to have customer support fix a major bug it leaves me cold. The same 17 videos appear on the main page. There is no way to have this be a multiple page site. It has no feed from Blinkx and no way to feed the videos from an Excel spreadsheet. The owner has encrypted crucial elements so you can only make cosmetic changes. You have no rights to fix the script and apathetic customer support for bugs. It works, but is very basic and rigid.

Hurray! After submitting suggestions the author is making changes to this that will make it a truly wonderful product. The v3.0 release of the product coming in mid January 2008 will have true control of the number of videos displayed along with pagination navigation (critical to this type of script) It will also have a Tag Cloud and the automatic installer has just been released. Final review to be submitted after testing next week. Customer support is listening and that is a great thing!
