DoComments

Hits: 572

Description: Do you need to accept, store and display visitors' comments on your personal blog or commercial storefront? Enabling communication with potential customers or fans of your online journal is no longer a problem with DoComments, a single PHP file that, nevertheless, offers a wide range of popular features. With just one line of PHP: 1) Make comments appear anywhere you want, 2) Let your visitors rate your content and then display that rating anywhere you want and 3) Show the number of comments on any topic anywhere you want. Allow your visitors to rate the comments themselves: is a particular comment helpful or unhelpful? Receive an email alert whenever a visitor posts a comment to your website or rates a comment as helpful or unhelpful. Impress your visitors when they see their comments post instantly---without refreshing the page. Look good with a smart user interface that touts smooth animations alongside big, bold names and distinctive text. DoComments is professional-grade software.

DoComments will catapult your website to a whole new level, Jul 20th, 20

Unlike many software developers, I actively use the code I write, and DoComments is no exception. I needed a solution to enable communication between myself and visitors to Johnnie's Winsock Tutorial so that readers could ask questions and expand the scope of the tutorial beyond what I'd written. At the same time, I wanted something innovative: that worked and looked good doing it. I don't know how I ran my website before DoComments---the software catapults the tutorial to a whole new level.

Essentially, I get attracted to DoComments, because of its look. It enhances the look of a webpage, while enabling a visitor to post his/her comment immediately. It has a whole bunch of features, than it used to claim. When I contacted author, to get some additional support, he made me impressed with his helping attitude. He explained me, how I can experiment with the DoComments to make it more attractive and user configurable. I'm thankful to Johnnie for his immediate help, to all my queries.

I've tried several commercial packages and I found the simplicity and online support of DoComments the best. It's a very savvy interface and I think, the future of comment boxes for hobby webmasters.
